A Family Guide to the Reorganization of the Clark County School District

HOW DID WE GET HERE?

The 2015 Legislature required a Committee to research and create a plan on how the Clark County School District can deliver better service to students and their families. This Committee deliberated for over a year and their plan was recently finalized.

It is very important to realize that the plan does not break up the school district, nor does it create several new school districts. Instead, the plan reorganizes the district to allow each individual school to make site-based decisions on how they plan to improve student achievement and how to use their resources to accomplish their goals. While central administration is still tasked with holding schools accountable for high quality results, the school site itself will be the center of the decision making process that affects your child most.

WHAT CHANGES WILL WE SEE?

- ◆ A shift in roles and responsibilities for school supervisors, principals, and central support.
- ◆ A potential shift toward schools being able to purchase services.
- ◆ Site-based authority for essential student achievement decisions.
- ◆ An increase in family engagement through School Organizational Teams comprised of parents, teachers, staff, students, and/or community members.
- ◆ School resources aligned with the goal of increasing achievement.
- ◆ Accountability for student achievement, survey results and outcomes, and compliance with law, Board policy and regulations, and administrative directives.
